

COMPLY-OR-EXPLAIN LIST
IN RESPECT OF THE
DUTCH CORPORATE GOVERNANCE CODE
ALTICE N.V.
April 3, 2018

The Dutch Corporate Governance Code (the "Code") sets out corporate governance principles and best practice provisions related thereto that Dutch listed companies should comply with. The Code is established on a 'comply-or-explain' basis. Its principles and provisions are formulated from the starting point that companies have a two-tier board structure, whereby a separate corporate body in the form of a supervisory board supervises the management board of the company. Altice N.V. has a one-tier board structure, with non-executive board members supervising the executive board members. Such one-tier board is only explicitly mentioned in chapter 5 of the Code. Although quite limited, the explanation to the Code provides guidelines on how to interpret the corporate governance principles and best practice provisions for a company with a one-tier board structure. The Corporate Governance Code Monitoring Committee (i.e. the committee that established the Code) advised that in principle (i) all provisions referring to the supervisory board mutadis mutandis apply to non-executive board members, and (ii) all provisions referring to the management board generally mutadis mutandis apply to executive board members together with the non-executive board members. This comply-or-explain list is prepared in accordance with this starting point. Therefore, where a corporate governance principle or best practice provision refers to the management board, this should be read as the board as a whole: the executive board members and non-executive board members altogether. Where reference is made to the supervisory board, this should be interpreted as the non-executive board members.
